

Perfect Gifts for Young Readers

1. Bookish Tote Bag

Books bags don't just have to be for school; a bookish tote bag is an ideal gift for kids who love reading. Choose bags with fun images and prints—like illustrations or quotations from their favorite books—and have the bag personalized with their name.

2. Personalized Library Stamp

A personalized library stamp is a thoughtful gift for a budding librarian! With customizable designs featuring their name or initials, it helps your child take pride in their collection and ensures loaned books find their way back home.

3. Reading Apparel

There are many ways to use a clothing gift to showcase your child's love of reading. You could consider a "Reading is My Super Power" t-shirt, a pair of super cozy "Do Not Disturb, I'm Reading" socks, or an "All Booked Up" sweatshirt.

4. Book Light

If a young reader loves to cozy up with a book in bed at night, a book light illuminates the process. Try a tap-touch-controlled silicone reading light. These are USB rechargeable and often double up as a night light, as a second tap turns the light red rather than white.

5. Bookmarks

Is your giftee ready for more complex storylines? Once a child embarks on chapter books, a bookmark makes an excellent small gift, removing the temptation to dog-ear pages of their books to mark their place.

6. Notebooks or Journals

Your budding reader might also be a budding writer. Gifting them a special notebook or journal to jot down their ideas will help nurture this talent and help them practice their writing skills.

7. Gift Cards

It can feel daunting to gift a book to an avid reader; you worry that you might not pick something at the right level or that your gift may duplicate a book they already have. Giving them a gift card for a bookstore means that they can choose their next adventure and, as a bonus, get an extra trip to the bookstore.

8. An E-Reader

Most e-readers are suitable for children aged seven and up, and you can set parental controls to help manage the content they can access. You can also use e-readers to access e-book loans through your local library, which means your bookworm can explore even more books.

9. Storytelling Speaker

Storytelling speakers like Yoto Player or Tonie Box allow children to listen to stories while they travel, do chores, or take walks. With the help of these devices, kids can learn while on the go, build their vocabulary, improve their comprehension, and hear great examples of fluent reading.

10. Reading Subscriptions

With a reading subscription, a child can receive a regular book (usually monthly) wrapped and delivered to their door. You can set parameters for the reading gifts, including reading level and topics of interest.
